Approximately twenty states have their own programs for preparing environmental impact assessments of proposed governmental and private actions. These are often called “little NEPAs,” but in the aggregate, they are responsible for the preparation of far more impact assessments than are created under the National Environmental Policy Act.

The program will provide a unique opportunity to compare the impact assessment practices in the different states, to identify best practices, to highlight emerging analysis techniques, and to understand the role of the courts in the impact assessment system. Environmental impact assessment issues will be examined in the context of the mini-NEPAs, with NEPA itself as a basis for comparison.

The program is designed to appeal to lawyers and environmental professionals from the U.S. and from other countries working in the environmental impact assessment field.

  The room block that IAIA reserved for conference delegates at the Hyatt Regency-Cambridge filled very rapidly, and the conference hotel block is currently fully booked. The Hyatt has a few vacancies for some nights, but the $99 conference rate will not apply. To help delegates locate alternative hotels, IAIA has added a link to the IAIA’05 conference page (http://www.hotels-and-discounts.com/CITY/Cambridge_Cheap_Hotels.htm), or delegates may contact IAIA HQ for additional information and alternatives. Boston has a metro system referred to as the “T.” Look for hotels convenient to a “T” stop or bus line. Taxi fares are reported to be reasonable, and the Hyatt-Cambridge has offered to transport delegates to hotels or “T” stops within Cambridge.
