

Insurance and Climate Change

Chris Johnson

chris.johnson@fmglobal.com

Summary: The ability to predict with accuracy the frequency, nature and severity of extreme storm events is an evolving science. The engineering knowledge to avoid or mitigate damage is available today. This session will examine the impact loss control can have on commercial and industrial losses and highlight the role of research based standards.